verted into a panic.

In the present case there seems to have been no bad faith on the part of the Minister, in the article, which was most injurious to his character. Fortunately, the mischief was promptly checked, and the harm done was comparatively small. It was easily shown that the security on which the bank had been founded was not worth £70,000 was worth more than a double that amount, as estimated by an experienced valuator. The Government, too, took the matter up, and a reassuring statement was made in Parliament, whilst the Associated Bank had been able to maintain the stability of the Savings Bank by offering to advance any sum which might be needed, to enable it to meet the sudden rush of withdrawals. All that could be done to stop the panic was done, and yet the Government were not great deal of indirect harm was caused.

Amongst the poorer classes, who live as a general rule from hand to mouth, the habit of saving is only acquired with difficulty. It is, however, lost with the greatest ease. A single report is withdrawn from the Savings Bank, and it finds its way into its emptiness. There are so many ways of spending money, and so much is always needed by a poor family. Thus a great deal of the money so hastily withdrawn is probably never by the depositor, but will be frittered away on small expenditures, even if it is not wasted in dissipation. The habit of saving will be lost in many cases, and the disappearance of the nest egg will dishearten the poor man, who had it slowly accumulating for years. Another smaller and less important, loss to depositors has been caused by the forfeiture of interest. The bank, according to its rules, only paid interest on the accounts which were closed up to the end of the preceding month, and thus the depositors lost interest on the money lost about three weeks' interest, even though he subsequently changed his mind and paid the money in again.

The lesson which this incident has given to the depositors will probably of service in the future, that they should not to allow themselves to be too readily influenced by unfounded and sensational to reports of danger. It may also be hoped that the crisis will awaken a useful sympathy.

and, in consequence, the country has suffered from the pestilence caused it; and if this be so, then the occurrence need hardly be regretted.

To-day being a public holiday, the following arrangements have been made:—The mail train of the General Post Office—The various offices of that branch will be open from 9.30 a.m. till 10 a.m. The telegraph offices will be open from 9.30 a.m. by letter service. The country mails usually despatched in the afternoon, evening, and also the despatches to and from foreign mails, will close at 9 a.m. with the exception of English mails per P. & O. Company's steamer Victoria, which will close at 10 a.m. The iron pillar receivers, and the telegraph cables, will be closed at 10 a.m. cleared at the first usual hour on those days.

The Governor will hold a levee at Government House to-day, at 3 p.m., in honour of Her Majesty's Commissioner of the Straits Settlements, and to the levee—gentlemen who have received cards will pass into the principal dining-room not later than 2.30 p.m. Gentlemen who are not presented by his Excellency are requested to meet in the verandah at the same hour. Other gentlemen who are not presented by his Excellency are requested to call on his Excellency at 3 o'clock, and are requested to pass through the hall into the dining-room, as directed by the side-captain in waiting. All officers of the staff, and all persons in the service of the Government, are requested to call on his Excellency at 3 o'clock, and are requested to pass through the hall into the dining-room, as directed by the side-captain in waiting. the lightning is described as extremely strong. Lightning struck the ship with dashing, almost blinding brilliancy, and what is rarely seen on this coast, a large quantity of rain fell. The lightning was so close that it was said, playing at the yard-arms and about the rigging of the ship. The direction of the wind was from the north-east, and between that quarter and the east. The coast was visible for some hours after the steamer passed through this storm.

SIR HENRY PARKES is making satisfactory progress towards recovery. The Premier says he cannot say whether the leg has been broken, but it has been successfully treated, and although the leg has caused excruciating pain he believes it is doing well. On Friday the bandages were removed for the first time, and the leg was found to be in a good position. Mr. Maurice O'Connor, who set the broken limb, all favourable signs possible towards recovery.

Since his accident last Sunday week Sir Henry Parkes has been the recipient of widespread sympathy and the several thousands of income of his life the Premier has received expressions of public and private regard, but never have they been so numerous and so genuine as during the past week. These kindly well-wishings have come from all parts of the country, from all classes of the population, and from all ages. For instance, as that Mrs. Johnson, widow of the late Captain Johnson, of Ansonville House, writes to him, "I am very glad to hear from Lord and Lady Carrington, Admiral Lord Charles Scott, and telegrams from the Earl and Countess of Devonshire, and from the Duke of Devonshire."

part of a scheme submitted by the city surveyor some time ago, under which the iron railing opening the hall and manservants' passage into a large open square. At present the noise is anything but a state of perfection. It is now desired that the square be widened and the railing removed it suitable for traffic.

It is also done with a chamber letter issued by Cardinal Moran, a collection in aid of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the diocese of Sydney yesterday. It is not expected that the church authorities will be in a position to make known the amounts collected in the various churches.

Norman of Queensland. Symonds, who is now in England, is the son of John Manning, Sir John Hay, Sir F. Duxley, Sir John Robertson; from Cardinal Moran, several of the sons, and from the judges and others in the colony. Symonds is indebted to Sir Henry by all the premises of the colonies expressing their own sympathy and that of their colleagues. The leading members of the colony, the most influential men of all shades of political opinion, have sent their best wishes for the Premier's speedy recovery, and Sir Henry has returned to the colony, through his mayors and aldermen, have officially communicated their regret that such an untoward accident should have befallen the Premier. The Council of the Colony, by a unanimous vote, has expressed its sympathy, and the Council of Education, by special order, makes inquiry into Sir Henry's condition, and Lady Carrington and other ladies send choice flowers for his recovery.

There is a rumour that the falling of the iron mast of the Newswatch is no accident but the work of an assassin. It is no accident that both the miners and
